

Marriage Matters

Learn from online matchmaking

Online matchmaking is arguably the best option for finding life partners these days. One can arrange his or her own love marriage! It might not be the perfect way, but then which one is? Here are some positive as well as negative lessons learnt from online matchmaking.

1. An Accountant? How boring! He likes sports only? Not my type! His idea of marriage is having lots of kids? Huh! No way. Ah! This one is a Scientist, likes movies and classical music. And his idea of marriage is everlasting bond of love! He sounds nice and interesting! I am definitely going to reply to his mail.

You do not have to entertain each and every guy who shows interest in you. You can read their profiles and decide whether you are interested or not.

2. It is so peaceful! No over-enthusiastic relatives to take your 'interview'. Just you and your partner, mailing and chatting about everything you want to know about each other.

The biggest advantage - you have your privacy. No group discussions with fathers, mothers, uncles, aunts. Simply one to one

3. I can never talk to a guy openly in the first meeting. I am a very shy person. No wonder, the previous guys whom I met, never got back with a proposal. But mailing and chatting seemed to work ideally for me. I told him everything about myself and got to know everything I wanted to know about him. And then when we met. It never felt like a first meeting. I was so comfortable talking to him!

Online sites are an amazing option for shy/timid people to find life partners of their choice.

4. You know everything about him! He was absolutely frank and forthcoming. You too have told him everything about yourself, even things you would've otherwise felt awkward about telling him in person.

Since you were exchanging mails or chatting, you could ask each other every detail, without feeling awkward, which would've been pretty uncomfortable if you would've met in person.

5. Wow, he looks stunning, especially in that picture when he was wearing a blazer. You are dying to meet him, but uh-ho, when you actually see him in person, well... how you wished that love actually was blind!

Never expect the person to look as good as he does in his photographs.

6. When he said he is adventurous, he meant he likes sitting at home and watch James Bond. When he said he loves dressing you must not have imagined in your wildest dreams that Govinda is his idol!

Very often what a person says, what he means and what you understand are three different things.
